

Afterschool in the Time of COVID-19:

Survey Results Find
Programs In Jeopardy
but Rising to Meet Needs

July 2020

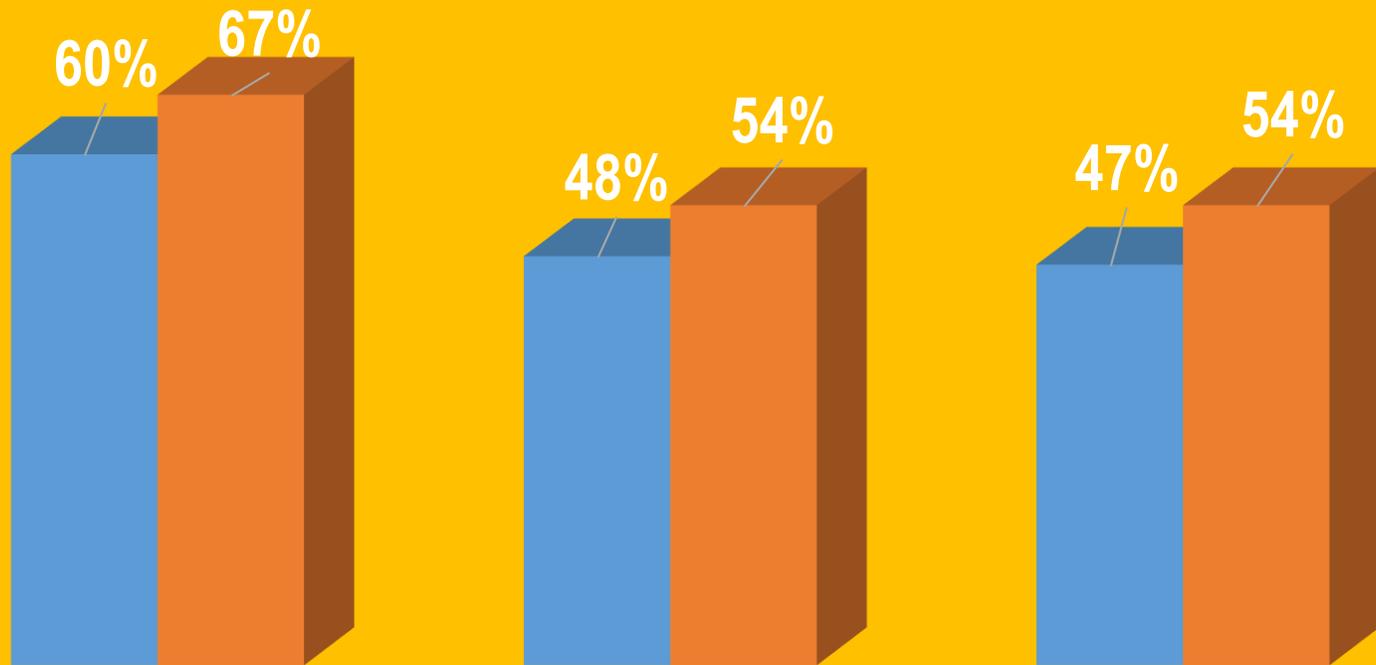

Methodology

- Online survey conducted by Edge Research
- May 28 – June 30
- n= 914
- 47 states and Washington, D.C.

Providing supports

- 70% of respondents are serving students in some capacity

Serving youth & finding ways to stay connected to youth

Serving or delivering meals

Connecting families with community resources

Overall

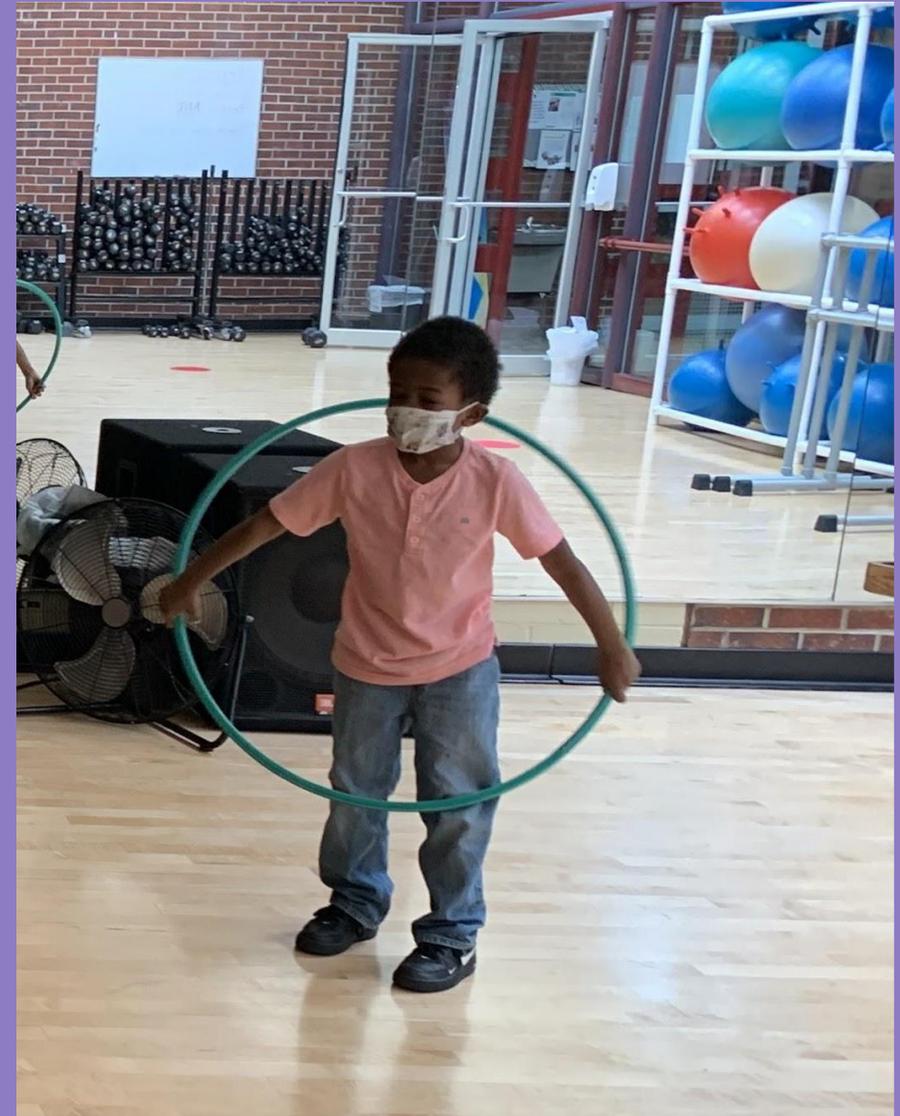

Serving predominantly low-income students

18%

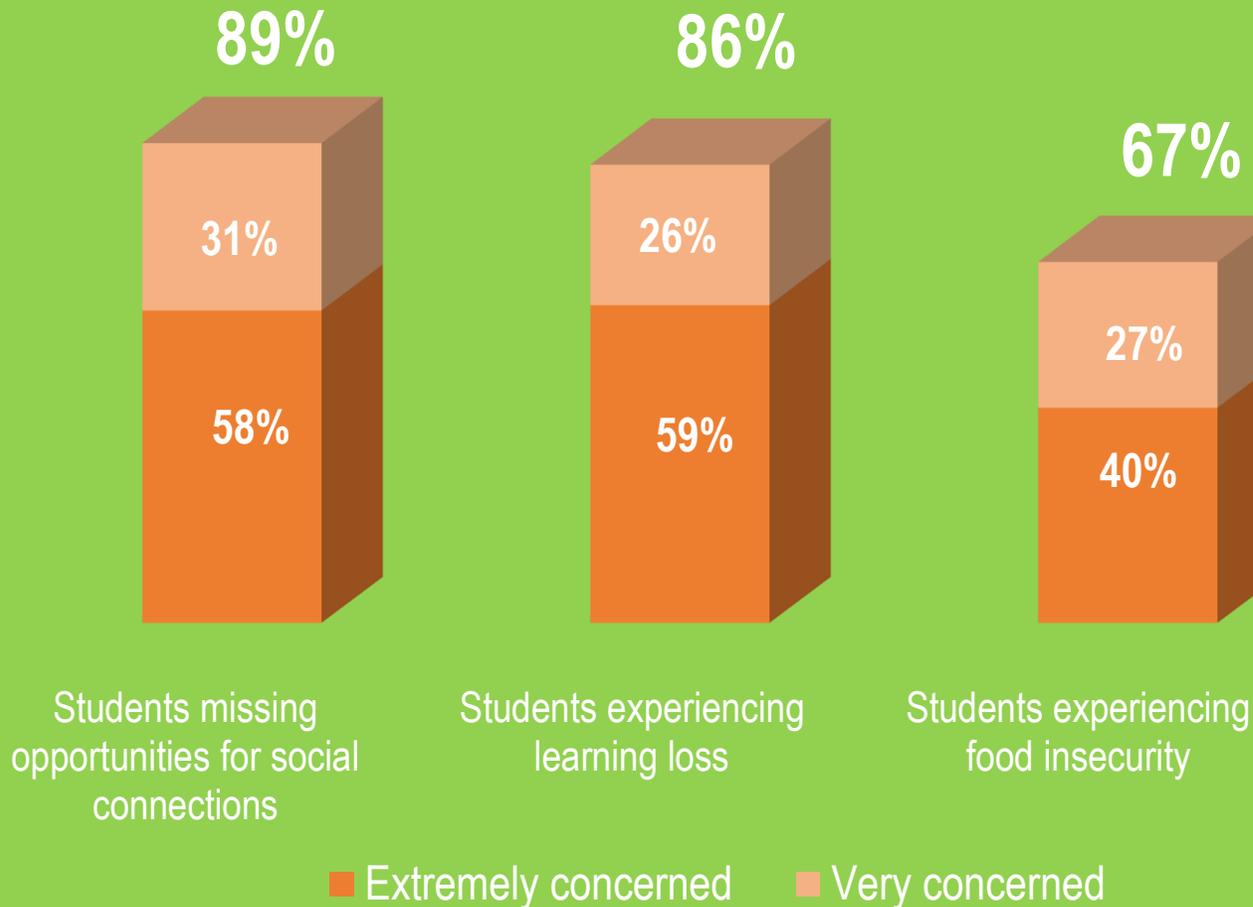

of programs

serving children of essential workers

Concerns about children and families

- 78% of respondents were “extremely” or “very” concerned about losing touch with student in need

84%

of programs are concerned that they won't be able to provide services – in person or virtually – this fall

More than 8 in 10

program providers say

funding (84%) and better guidance and resources to protect the health and safety of staff and students (82%) is “extremely” or “very” important

Afterschool Alliance

A hopeful outlook

52%

of program providers are optimistic about the future of their afterschool program

61% of programs
planning to offer
summer programming

Learn More & Next Steps

Fact Sheet -

<http://afterschoolalliance.org/documents/Afterschool-COVID-19-Wave-1-Fact-Sheet.pdf>

Topline Findings -

<http://www.afterschoolalliance.org/documents/Afterschool-COVID-19-Wave-1-Provider-Survey-Toplines.pdf>

Data Dashboard –

<http://afterschoolalliance.org/covid/Afterschool-COVID-19-dashboard.cfm>

Respond to Wave 2 of Survey:

<https://3to6.co/survey>

Afterschool in the Time of COVID-19

July 2020

Since the first statewide stay-at-home orders were issued in mid-March, individuals across the United States have found their lives and livelihoods upended by the coronavirus. As states enact safety measures and transition between phases of reopening to combat the virus, families are struggling with school closures, job losses, food insecurity, and more. Afterschool programs are joining local efforts to address the urgent needs of children and families while facing an uncertain future themselves.¹

Throughout the crisis, many afterschool providers have been innovating to stay connected with students and keep them safe, healthy and engaged in learning, even while struggling to keep their own doors open. Many programs face budget shortfalls and will need additional staff and professional development, as well as more space and resources to provide consistent care for children and families as school schedules shift.

In the first in a series of surveys that take the pulse of the afterschool field, it is clear that although afterschool programs remain a vital partner to help young people emerge from this crisis strong, resilient, and hopeful, they are in need of dire support.

The future of afterschool programs is in jeopardy

The Afterschool in the Time of COVID-19 survey finds that afterschool programs are severely affected by the hardships created by the pandemic. As programs work to continue to provide services in their communities, they face their own struggles, from funding to staffing, with a majority unsure if the worst is over or yet to come (55%).

84% of programs report that they are concerned that they will not be able to provide services in the fall

